An adverb clause is a group of words that is used to change or qualify the meaning of an adjective, a verb, a clause, another adverb, or any other type of word or phrase with the exception of determiners and adjectives that directly modify nouns. Adverb clauses always meet three requirements: First, an adverb clause always contains a subject and a verb. Second, adverb clauses contain subordinate conjunctions that prevent them from containing complete thoughts and becoming full sentences. Third, all adverb clauses answer one of the classic "adverb questions": "When? Why? How? Where?" Examples of Adverb Clauses As you read the following adverb clause examples, you'll notice how these useful phrases modify other words and phrases by providing interesting information about the place, time, manner, certainty, frequency, or other circumstances of activity denoted by the verbs or verb phrases in the sentences. While adverb clauses are slightly more complicated than simple adverbs, they are worth learning about. The adverb clauses in these examples are italicized for easy identification. In each of the sentences below, find and underline the independent clauses. Combine each set of sentences below to create a new sentence. Use the word in parentheses to combine the sentences. Change the simple sentences below into system wide sentences. A subordinate clause (dependent clause) does not express a complete thought, and must be attached to a main clause. Read each set of sentences below. Create a sentence that will signal to the reader that the sentence in parentheses is the most important. Connect each of the following sentences to a related, independent clause to create a solid sentence. Use words like after, although, who, which, when, until, when, so that, or since. Underline the subordinate clauses in each sentence below. Add a comma where necessary. Write 5 original sentences. Include an adverbial clause for each as indicated in parentheses. Use the subordinate clauses below as "seedlings" to grow them into full fledged complex sentences. Write your sentence in the box. If it is a simple or compound sentence, rewrite it, adding or changing information to turn it into a sophisticated sentence. Use your imagination to turn the simple sentences below into a complete and complex one by adding subordinate clauses. Check the correct box to indicate the type of sentence. Underline the subordinate clauses in each sentence below. Add a comma where necessary. Identify each sentence as either compound or complex. Change the simple sentences below into complete sentences. Conditionals PDF Notes, Documents and Exercises with Answers If clauses are conditional statements. In some cases, they are divided into type 0, type1, type2 and type3. The characteristic that distinguishes these types is time differences. Sentences of type 0, consist of two clauses. One of them is the basic sentence and the other is the condition sentence. The basic sentence refer to the action that can occur when the condition is fulfilled. That's mean it expresses the result. Starting a sentence with a basic sentence does not change the meaning. We express events with type 1 (if clause) at the moment or in the future when a certain condition is met. Tenses that can be used as a basis are simple present (do / does) in the conditional sentence and simple future (will) in the basic sentence. If Clause Type 2 is used to think of the opposite of an event that is happening in the present or in the future, to put forward a condition and to express the result of this imaginary condition. Therefore, the tense that we can use must be a bit more past than the tense that we will use to express the truth. So, that is like to use; would instead of will, did instead of do, could instead of can. It is often used to express wishes and desires for the past. In If Clauses Type 3, it is used to reverse the events that occurred in the past, to put forward a condition and to express the result of that condition. It is usually used for sentences that express complaints. Here are 5 Examples of Conditional Sentences; If you do not win scholarship, your father will be very sad. If I have enough strawberries, I will bake a strawberry cake for you. If you don't brush your teeth regularly, your teeth decays. If she had found his phone number, she might have called him for the party. If I could have spoken english very well, I would have talked to the tourists in Paris. Here are Conditional PDF Documents and Notes; There are mainly three kinds of sentences in English: simple, complex and compound. Simple sentence A simple sentence consists of just one clause. Examples are given below. The dog barks. The kettle boils. Birds live in nests. The boys are singing. In its simplest form, a simple sentence consists of a subject and a verb. We can add more meaning to the sentence by including qualifiers, objects, complements etc. Sitting on a branch, the monkey gibbered. The little girl was carrying a basket on her head. Compound sentence A compound sentence is made up of two or more independent clauses. The boys sang and the girls danced. This compound sentence consists of two simple clauses connected by the coordinating conjunction and. Another example is given below. Men may come and men may go, but I go on forever. This compound sentence consists of three independent clauses. We make compound sentences by joining independent clauses with the help of coordinating conjunctions. More examples of compound sentences are given below. You may watch TV or you can go out to play. You should either sit quietly or go out. The old man could neither see nor hear. He took the test several times but he couldn't pass. He is famous, yet he is very humble. She was angry, still she kept her cool. The thieves not only robbed the man of his possessions, but also inflicted injuries on him. Notes The words however, therefore and nevertheless are not conjunctions. They cannot be used to connect two independent clauses. My car broke down on the way; therefore, I hired a taxi. (NOT My car broke down on the way, therefore I hired a taxi.) He lost all his money; nevertheless, he is cheerful. Two independent clauses need to be connected with a coordinating conjunction or separated with a full stop or a semicolon.
